

Teaching reflection #4

Taryn s, Oct. 28th/22

Today I continued my lessons on debate and I included some new/expanded language that my sponsor teacher had suggested along with a workbooklet to hand out. The students seemed engaged and happy, so I thought it went over well. I will be making a worksheet for my next debate lesson as each lesson I teach twice with each section (since there's two sections). I sent my materials too my sponsor teacher a little too late again only because I revised my lesson that day so I'm still working on time management.

Teaching reflection #5

Taryn s, Nov 1/22

I retaught my first debate lesson to another section and changed a few things. I used the whiteboard more, writing things down and getting students to do that too. I got an amazing compliment from one of my students today which really helped my mental state as I've been going through a lot the few previous days and have been doubting myself. I believe they had fun as they did a lot of group work and was told by the students that they prefer working in groups as they feel that it helps their learning. I was given some feedback to maybe include some papers/worksheets to accompany the group discussions so I will take that into consideration, its just hard making so man worksheets as I'm busy working a lot.
